Bidding Is Done by Signs, and Price Paid Is Known Only to Seller and Buyer.

EW YORK, April 24.-Chinese auctions are unique and interesting, though they are devoid of the bustle and excitement of the American affairs.

The auctioneer leans over a slightly elevated counter and exhibits his wares, saying nothing. Neither does the bidder speak, but merely steps forward to the auctioneer, and runs his fingers up his sleeve, making pressure on the salesman's arm, thus indicating how much he will pay for the article. Another and another repeat the action, until the one signifying the highest price receives the article without a word being exchanged on either side. Only the auctioneer and the successful bidder know the price offered and accepted.

STILL HAS HOPE FOR HIS LIFE

James M. Shockley Is Confident That He Will Get Life Sentence, and Not Death.

AMES M. SHOCKLEY has apparent ly been in better health and spirts since he was convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of Amasa Gleason that he was before. reaction, after knowing the worst and then gaining hope of securing a new trial or an appeal, has acted favorably upon the young man's nerves and appetite. Shockley firmly believes that as a result of the efforts of his attorneys in his behalf he will at least be accorded a commutation of sentence from death to life imprisonment. He has builded upon this cope more strongly than he did upon the result of the first trial."

And, while the sentiment of the com munity in general is so strongly against Shockley, there are those who share with him the belief that there are grounds upon which a sentence of life imprisonment should yet be secured for the confessed murderer. A prominent criminal lawyer said yesterday:

What a Lawyer Thinks.

What a Lawyer Thinks.

There is no question that the verdict against Shockley was the result largely of public sentiment. One of the jurors said to me after the trial that he didn't believe the law and evidence justified the death sentence for Shockley, but that he voted for the verdict as it stood simply because sentiment seemed to be all that way. I have no doubt that others of the jury were affected in like manner.

"Then, very often a single word or phrase will have a great effect on the minds of a jury. I believe that the use of the words, 'recommendation for mercy,' was unfortunate for Shockley, especially in the light of the District Attorney's argument to the effect that he nad shown no mercy to the poor street car men and their families, and therefore none should be shown to him. Had the jury been instructed simply that it had the option of bringing in a verdict imposing the death sentence or one providing for life imprisonment, they would have felt freer to vote for the lighter sentence."

Sentence Is Postponed.

The status of the case at present is that The status of the case at present is that the passing of sentence upon the convicted man, which was originally set for today, has been deferred for one week to give his attorneys time to prepare affigavits in support of their motion for a new trial. As is customary in such cases, the defense cites all of the possible grounds for a new trial, so that any emergency may be covered, and, naturally, the attorneys are not saying just what particular points they expect to rely upon mainly. It is evident however that the mainly. It is evident, however, that the most important arguments will be that premeditated murder was not shown, and that the jury was unduly influenced by considerations other than were provided by the evidence and the court's instructions.
